Giving Tuesday!

Giving thanks to our community!

Since today is Giving Tuesday, we would like to take a moment and give thanks to you. As we celebrate our 20th year, we are filled with so much gratitude. Thank you for your support, your kindness, and your generosity.

You have believed in The Wolf School's mission. You have supported our students, their families, and our staff. You have encouraged others to believe in Complex Learners and the endless possibilities their futures hold.

We wouldn't be here without you and we're so grateful for you!

With heartfelt appreciation,

Grateful and Giving!

Wolf Students give thanks and give back!

At the last All School Assembly before Thanksgiving break, Wolf students shared some of the things they were grateful for. Naming everything from "The Wolf School" to "my karate teacher," there was no shortage of gratitude!

Along with the power of gratitude, our students have also been demonstrating their ability to give back. Whether it was collecting canned food for the local food pantry or collecting books for those in need, our students' kindness and generosity made us very proud!

Room 7 students collected books for the organization Books are Wings.

Gratitude:

So Much More Than A Stuffed Turkey

Scientists tell us if we demonstrate gratitude all year round it has innumerable benefits including less depression, better impulse control, greater optimism and positivity, a stronger immune system, and lower levels of stress hormones.

Now get this – you can teach kids gratitude! You can help children improve the way they feel about themselves and their world. We know that children with complex learning and attention issues often suffer from poor self-esteem, impulsivity and a sense of hopelessness. Combating all that is difficult, but helping Complex Learners practice gratitude can have a significant impact on their outlook and behavior.
